

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I would like to thank my colleagues who have supported my work over the past several years, most of whom have read and commented on various drafts of the manuscript, and who have also been a great source of friendship: Deepak N. Sawhney, Therese Grisham, Robert Burns Nevelndine, and Thomas Carl Wall. To my friends, Chris Allert and Christopher Gerron, thank you for sharing the intelligence of your lives. You have contributed to this work simply by being-in-the-world. I would, also, like to thank Gisela Brinker-Gabler for her support of this project, and her close readings and comments on it, as well as Brett Levinson, Neil Christian Pages, Sandra R. Luft, and Frederic M. Dolan. Vince Alvarez provided editorial assistance. Randy Walker inspired me with his songs and voice during the long silence between completing this work and sharing it with the world. And, finally, I want to thank Giorgio Agamben for his kindness, generosity, and time during the seminar on The Time That is Left at UC Berkeley in October – November of 1999, without which this work would never have been written. The Italian edition of Il tempo che resta contains an acknowledgement of the collaborations that took place in the seminars that Agamben conducted in 1999. The present text is an effort to continue that collaborative work. Because of this, in addition to the important dedications that preface each chapter, this book is also dedicated to Giorgio Agamben.
